STACKPACKS & SAIL COVERS

Welcome to our special summer Feature of the Month edition starring Stackpacks & Sail Covers, two items that can easily be confused with one another.

STACKPACK

SAIL COVER

What's the difference?

STACKPACK

A Stackpack is permanently on the boom with the Lazyjack system attached to it with a separate boot section normally. The Stackpack also allows for more headroom, as the sail is on top of the boom and is easier to stow.

SAIL COVER

A cheaper alternative, the Sail Cover covers the sail and is secured with shock cords and hooks under the boom. The Sail Cover needs to be completely removed if you wish to use the sail, and cannot be used when the boat has Lazyjacks.

LIKE IT? WANT IT? SORT IT!

If you feel that your sail could do with some additional protection, why not consider a Sail Cover, or a Stackpack?

Tecsew's Sail Covers and Stackpacks are made with resilient, waterproof fabrics from the Sunbrella Plus range, which has a superior coating that adds stiffness to the fabric, resulting in the fabric draping much better over the sail, which gives an improved fit.

One important thing to remember is that if you do opt for a Stackpack, we will need to know if your sail is loose footed or not.
